SOCIO - ECONOMIC CHARACTERISTICS OF SUBURBS

Today, the social and economic functions of local government have reached such a high degree of complexity that detailed and accurate statistics are continually required regarding the size of population, its socio-economic characteristics and its distribution among various areas.

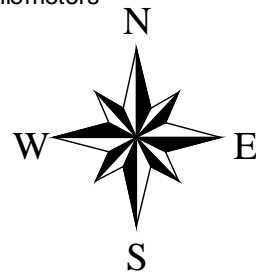

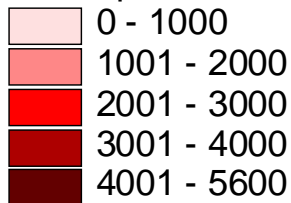

This report is a summary account of various indicators by suburb, and focuses on the size of population, gross population density, average household size, member of households, median household income and per capita income. The above indicators are based on the 1996 Census.
